

One Site, Infinite Solutions

Ideas Competition - Downtown Evansville IN

OBJECTIVE:

The goal of this competition is to explore the intrinsic differences between designers and how they creatively approach design challenges. We ask designers (students, interns, architects, and artists) to collaborate with us to generate design solutions for an urban lot in the core of downtown Evansville at the corner of 4th and Walnut Street. This lot has been selected due to its direct adjacency to the new Indiana University School of Medicine, which is currently under construction. The competition organizers do not own this lot, and we are not seeking legitimate proposals to develop it. The site represents a common design problem in existing urban areas. By asking all the designers to approach precisely the same problem using the same format, we seek to draw a contrast between the designers and their designs.

PROJECT:

To produce a design for an underutilized lot in an urban setting.

Be Creative.

Be Original.

Be Unique.

It's up to you what to propose. It could be a house, a business, a tower, a park, an installation piece....

Designers can decide to keep the existing structure and modify it, or demolish the building and start with a blank slate.
